Att. No. 1: A two-page report mentioning the sighting of [redacted] a RIGA-class escort at approximately N 69-20, E 36-25, [redacted] In Arkhangelsk [redacted] observed about fourteen naval vessels of the T-301 class [redacted] many two-engined propeller aircraft at the civilian airfield near Kegostrov, and many jet aircraft constantly landing, on a southerly course, and taking off in an easterly direction, in an area south-southwest of Arkhangelsk [redacted] no further description.

Att. No. 2: A two-page report mentioning the sighting of a naval vessel at 50X1-HUM

[redacted] position approximately N 65-30, E 39-30. [redacted] was on a northerly course making about fifteen knots. The vessel was about 100 feet long; she had a bridge with a platform on the forward side, a single mast in the middle of the bridge, a break at the after end of the bridge, a deckhouse half the length of the afterdeck, and no guns. She was painted gray and flew a naval flag.

50X1-HUM

[redacted] At Sawmill No. 9-10, the depth of water at the pier was 22 feet. The pier itself had been improved and extended to the west 300 or 400 feet. There were no cranes.

Att. No. 3: A one-paragraph report, plus an extremely rough sketch of a naval vessel sighted [redacted] just outside of Cape Orlov (approximately N 67-13, E 41-17). The vessel was on a southerly course. She is described as having two single masts, one forward and one aft, with antenna equipment at the top, and a third, high, grid-mast just aft of the single stack.¹ 50X1-HUM

Att. No. 4: A two-page report mentioning the sighting of one large and two small naval vessels and one submarine, on a southwesterly course in line ahead, outside Kolskiy Zaliv /no further description/. [redacted] 50X1-HUM

Att. No. 5: A two-paragraph report mentioning the [redacted] sighting of one destroyer, 14 MTBs, and a corvette-type vessel, outside Bukhta Tsyp-Navolok /approximately N 69-43, E 33-07/. [redacted] 50X1-HUM

[redacted] The vessels were in line ahead on an easterly course making sixteen to eighteen knots, the destroyer and the MTBs first with about two cable-lengths between each vessel. The corvette was about one nautical mile to the rear.² 50X1-HUM

Att. No. 6: A one-page report on Onega harbor. [redacted] At the pier [redacted] there were seven [redacted] ships each approximately 230 feet long. The wharf was in good condition and was being improved. There were no cranes. [redacted] 50X1-HUM had one gun on the forecastle, a bridge, a top-mast and one smokestack.

1. [redacted] Comment: This might possibly be a T-43-class radar picket ship with two KNIFE REST radars.

[redacted] picked out the T-301 class [redacted] similar to the vessels, [redacted] 50X1-HUM

In the same area, four vessels estimated to be about 800 tons each were also observed. [redacted] described the ships as small destroyers, [redacted]

2. AIRCRAFT ACTIVITY: [redacted] could see [redacted] Kyego [redacted]

[redacted] just across from Mosyev Island. A varying number of aircraft were observed on the airfield. The traffic was not great and [redacted] 50X1-HUM

[redacted] the field was only used for civilian air-routes. On one occasion, fourteen planes were observed on the field simultaneously. [redacted]

[redacted] they were two-engined propeller airplanes. 50X1-HUM

The landscape southwest of Archangel was [redacted], low and covered by forests. In a south-southwestern direction from the city, a long way in over the mainland, jet-planes were constantly observed landing and taking off. [redacted] most of the planes that landed went down on a southerly course, while those that took off went up in an easterly direction. [redacted] 50X1-HUM

west [redacted] was sighted in an approximate position .

N 69°20' - E 36°25'.

Description: The vessel was flush-decked with two single guns in shields forward, then came the bridge, the mast, an angled smokestack, one gun in a shield aft. The estimated size of the ship, [redacted] identified as a destroyer, was about 1600 to 1700 tons. [redacted] the RIGA class [redacted] 50X1-HUM

A vessel of the same type was seen some hours later. This vessel sailed far north [redacted] on a steady westerly course. 50X1-HUM

[redacted] a number of smaller naval vessels were seen in Archangel, tied up at the piers on the west side of the city just across from Kege Island.

Description: About fourteen vessels were similar, on most counts, and were assumed [redacted] to be mine-sweepers of about 200 tons. The 50X1-HUM break in the forecastle was approximately midships, and most of the vessels
